

Dear Seattle Metro Chamber Members:

This week's primary election dramatically culled the field of Seattle City Council candidates from 55 to 14, giving Seattle voters a clear choice between effective new leadership or more of the same dysfunction.

Candidates endorsed by our political action committee, CASE (Civic Alliance for a Sound Economy), finished among the top two in all seven Seattle City Council races. These candidates offer a clear alternative to the status quo: they can rebuild trust, get back to the basics of local government, and represent the districts and city they serve.

Now, it's time to look ahead to November. As Mayor Jenny Durkan told KUOW radio, "a general election is a whole new ballgame." We agree. Change is in the air, but we cannot be complacent.

The Chamber and CASE want what Seattle voters want: an effective Seattle City Council.

We can't do this without you. To get involved with CASE, please contact its campaign director, Michael McIntyre.

Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
Marilyn
